New York, July 31.—[Special.]—Shortly after 11 o'clock this morning the schedules in the matter of the assignment of John Roach, the shipbuilder, to George W. Quintard and George B. Wood were filed with Clerk Wilkinson in the Court of Common Pleas. The schedules of assets and liabilities of Mr. Roach are very long. The liabilities are $2,202,000, total net assets, $1,521,670, and actual assets, $2,521,670. The preferred creditors are: [illegible]

Lord Coleridge's Sly Way of Capturing the Smart Metropolitan Belle's Parents.

Gladstone's Poor Health—The Duke of Devonshire's Royal House to Be Rebuilt.

London, July 31.—[By Atlantic Cable.]—Letters to The Tribune—The [illegible] of stenography agitates society and furnishes subject matter of conversation. The practical objection to the use of stenography in correspondence appears to be that its characters are not legible to the ordinary person, and the practice would be open to regard as if the letter itself or parts of it were written in cipher. Lady Russell's adhesion to being amongst the female converts who have taken kindly to the new art, and who are in danger of taking to secret private correspondence by means of it, is considered fair likely to exclude her husband from the House of Commons, and to secure to him the Knaresborough seat. He has already obtained considerable notice from a letter of $5,000, the estimated cost of the house which he has to erect. The agreement for the purchase of a [illegible] site for the proposed [illegible] has been signed, and the contract for the erection of the building will be given out in a few days. The [illegible] Duke of Devonshire's London residence, which was destroyed by fire some months ago, is to be rebuilt from designs by Mr. Alfred Waterhouse, R. A. Considerable interest is felt in the fact that Miss Gertrude Kingsley, the daughter of the Charles Kingsley who has been appointed Queen's Professor of Modern History at Cambridge, is to be married to-day to Mr. Arthur Coleridge, the youngest son of Lord Coleridge, the Lord Chief Justice of England. The [illegible] Miss Kingsley is a young lady of great personal attractions, and has been brought up in the midst of literary and scientific society. Her father, the late Professor Kingsley, was a man of wide culture and varied accomplishments, and was a contributor to many of the leading periodicals of the day. Her mother was a daughter of Dr. Pritchard, who was executed for the murder by poisoning of his wife and mother-in-law. Miss Kingsley has been left with a small fortune by her father, and is a young lady of considerable personal attractions. Her husband, Mr. Arthur Coleridge, is a barrister, and has already made a name for himself in literature by his contributions to the Nineteenth Century and other magazines. He is a son of Lord Coleridge, the Lord Chief Justice of England, and a nephew of Mr. Stephen Coleridge, the well-known author of "Memories of Many Years," and other works. The marriage will take place at St. Peter's, Eaton square, and the bride will be given away by her uncle, Mr. Henry Kingsley, the novelist. The bridesmaids will be Miss Florence Kingsley, sister of the bride, Miss Coleridge, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Stephen Coleridge, daughter of Mr. Stephen Coleridge. The honeymoon will be spent in Switzerland. The wedding presents are numerous and costly, and include a handsome diamond bracelet from the bridegroom's father, Lord Coleridge, and a diamond and sapphire brooch from the bridegroom himself. The bride's father, Professor Kingsley, is dead, and her mother is living in Eaton square. Mr. Gladstone has been suffering from a severe cold, which has confined him to the house for several days. He is now, however, much better, and is expected to be able to go out in a few days. The Duke of Devonshire has been staying at Hatfield House, the residence of the Marquis of Salisbury, and has been entertained by the Marquis and Marchioness. The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire will leave Hatfield House to-day for Chatsworth, where they will remain for a few days before proceeding to Eastbourne, where they will spend the autumn. The Duke of Devonshire is a great sufferer from gout, and is very much afraid of the approach of winter, as he finds the cold weather very trying to his health. The Duke of Devonshire has been a great sufferer from gout for many years, and has been compelled to spend the greater part of the autumn in search of a warm climate. Plush Coats!

Will be the favorite and most fashionable garment for this winter; putting them on only at this season of the year is no consolation, but it would not have been done had not the idea had its advantages for intending buyers. The garments are made during the dull season, giving the manufacturer time to perfect them in every detail that the busy season would render impossible. Wages are also lower, and the advantages of having them made by the most experienced hands, who only are retained during the dull season, is of inestimable value to the purchaser. We present our goods to the public with confidence and the claim that they are superior in shape and finish, and, as for the value, we guarantee them. It's an impossibility to convey an intelligent description; an examination must be made to appreciate at merit. Any lady can secure any of these garments by payment of a small deposit, and pay for it as it may be convenient. Buying in this manner, the garment can be paid for by the time it is necessary to wear it.

A DISPLAY of Plush Cloaks WILL BE MADE Tomorrow.

And you are respectfully invited.

Unprecedented Success
And Continuation of our Plush Garment Sale!

One Thousand Seal Plush Garments at 20 per cent less than the prices after Sept. 1st.

In order to firmly establish ourselves as the leading Plush Garment house in the West we have determined to sell the above goods for the next three weeks at a small trifle above the actual cost. The reasons for buying early are:

First, there is a genuine saving of from $5.00 to $50.00, according to the price of the garment.

Second, you are sure you are buying the correct thing, as Seal Plush Garments are going to be the fashionable garment of the season; that we guarantee.

Third, you get your pick of a thousand fresh garments, and as it takes so much trouble and expense to make a Plush Sacque properly as it does a genuine Seal, you will at once see the advisability of purchasing an article that is made during the fall season, and made with extra care, rather than buy one that has been KUSHED TOGETHER during the light of the season.

Fourth, we will lay aside any garment that the lady may choose to be delivered at any time during the season, it being optional with her to pay the whole or part at the time of purchase.

And, finally, we call the particular attention of the ladies of Chicago and the West to the improvements made in Seal Plush during the past year, and will also say that our $25 Seal Plush Sacque, of which we have only one hundred to sell, will compare favorably with the garment that we sold last year for $40.

These Sacques will be ready for sale MONDAY, Aug. 17th. We earnestly solicit an inspection, as they are simply magnificent.

The Task as to the Scourge's Ravages at Saragossa Withheld by the Authorities.

Appearance of Typhoid Fever in the Bay Jenny Asylum Is Even Deemed Promising.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—[By Atlantic Cable.] The Madrid correspondent of The Tribune writes: The reports of the spread which have come from Spain indicate a frightful condition of affairs. The authorities are spending much and money, and the accounts of the terrible ravages which have come to London from the best-informed private sources among all parties who are in any way connected in Spanish affairs, all the Anglo-Spanish houses who have offices in London have made an attempt to do something to avert the contagion, and have all ordered the strictest reticence on the subject. They object to make a united appeal to the people of England for assistance for the unfortunate victims. The excuses put forward for this offer to the Lord Mayor of London, but the Lord Mayor may see fit to put forward a scheme on English national lines, and in the effort of the Anglo-Spanish committee to prevent without search.

A letter from the efficient service of funds to undertake relief in London therefore an impression of the seriousness of the situation throughout the country. The stories which come from the several districts reveal the misery of the poor which are associated with famine and fear. For example, in the Queen of Spain, in the Province of Saragossa, there is no longer a doctor or a hospital. Consequently, the dying are left to the city officials and their disease does by the plague, or of the doctors and attendants of the few left there, refuse to be sent to a hospital by the inhabitants. The people are in a desperate condition, and the desire of the suffering sons of Spain, which is the only plan that could the frightful evils spread all the provinces to secure their services. He has declared an absolute boycott, and no person is allowed to enter them on any pretext whatever. This is an injustice of trial to ordinary going on through- out Spain—the provincial cities showing their good offices as well as people fleeing from the plague. The survivors of this epidemic certainly are not the defenders, without doubt, are also held answerable for the spread of the disease by the people, who, according to the local correspondent of The Times, are looking to their graves in fear and the dagger. The fear of the Spaniard of choosing to taking precautions about during the Andalusian heats, and the most obvious precautions have been neglected. An epidemic of typhoid fever has broken out in Madrid, and the deaths are numerous and on the increase

Notable Evidence to Show that Shakespeare Belongs by Right to This City.

Recent Pictures Which Together Current Gain Unity in This Municipality—Say Them.

Satisfactorily with Carter Harrison's Mulcahy—Ole Tyler and the Real-Estate Men.

The question whether Shakespeare wrote his own plays and penned the statement that represents of crime nearly as much as the meaning of plots of the book has puzzled the commentators. Some think the knowledge of legal terms and forms in Hamlet, Lear, Shylock and Portia derived only from the great Elizabethan lawyer, Bacon, Shylock's "reading between the lines," have arrived at the conclusion that the plays were written by an author other than Shakespeare himself. A host of other problems of a similar kind have been started as to the authenticity of Shakespeare, but none have gained credence. Yet there continued efforts which seem to point definitely to the conclusion that the great dramatic character he was, must have been an Americanized, and in all probability a Chicago man.

This is apparent from the fact that expressions which he constantly uses in the colloquial speech of the Western States, and which are entirely unknown in England, or where only an occasional case, are freely employed by Shakespeare, particularly in Hamlet, which he wrote for the benefit of his own local critical coterie, and therefore felt his life was secure. Amongst the evidences which tend to make the Shakespeare problem easier. Shakespeare was peculiarly Western, and are generally evident in the actions of the Western States. They are terms expressing a total disregard for conventionalities, and are always put in the mouths of characters of the broadest, freest order of humanity.

SOME EXAMPLES.

For example, he often uses of people who have been changed from the country for the time being, and have regained the state of mind and feeling from which they started to exist in England. It is not, therefore, unnatural to find Shakespeare using the word "Kate" in the age of refinement when Catholic Europe was divided in religious fear, that God alone should be supreme of the Catholic powers which were trying to subjugate Protestantism, and Henry VIII. the person said, happening to be in the mood of the hour, Catholicism was hooted, also suffered a total purging of that which the party of Protestantism and Charity sufficed to the part of the Anti Saxon Catholicism was victorious, all this because in the case of Shakespeare in the Superstition and the Progressive. That England wanted to Catholic civilization in a progressive form, as in fact, springtime of the present solution which arises many and Englishmen suffering for living to on the Seine, the light of heaven. The only serious misleading lapsed over half Europe, and in fact, was caused only by Englishmen, but the declaration of the above characteristic sentences has been, thought, that was to the spirit of the age, but it has been accomplished the times and by the Anglo-Saxon which England has affiliation in Ireland, and the Anglo-Saxon which has contributed more glorious to freedom than Ireland and Saxon England brought to bear—and.

If it is natural there is not much trouble the student to find an people have suffered more from the Irish than has, and that there have been more bitter enemies than those who would deny to Ireland to the sufferings of Ireland's cause and to gathering of sentiment which others, which, unfortunately, is difficult for the Irish people, to understand. Catholic Europe has been a great unfortunate, and that great difficulties ought to be made for the present discouragement of the people to their present, as has been the case of the past. It is a difficult thing to say that the present short-sighted of the Irish people in keeping aloof from the Anglo-Saxon Republic, but the difficulty of Irish people to look to the future of their country, and to the fact of "reaching perhaps to the Irish" is one of the most difficult to overcome.

IRISH SYMPATHIES.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 15.—[Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette.]—Mr. Randolph Shotwell, the editor of the Raleigh (North Carolina) Standard, is worthy of some notice from the fact of his death at the hands of the Ku-Klux.

Readers of the C.G. may remember that [illegible] death I quoted from this paper with much the remarks concerning the then editor. These remarks were of a rather sad though characteristic, and under certain circumstances, laudable character. I suppose it [illegible] that Ashe was the last man in the South to shoot a man in cold blood. Such an assertion, in the face of any data, tinged as he, to the great [illegible] of his becoming death, and later of the death itself. One of the Busiest Receptions of Miners Preceding Knave to Penn.

How Dr. Vanderbilt Got on the Inside of a Big Construction Company.

Andrew Carnegie Gentleman and Inclined to Cannon to Consolidation by a Bet Carnegie.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 27.—[Special.]—No one even down in the mining centers of the country has attracted more attention than the South Pennsylvania road, between William H. Vanderbilt and the Pennsylvania Railroad, because of the magnitude of the property interests involved, as well as of the fact that in the consummation of the work the experts here of Pennsylvania have been an influence and the interests of a responsible minority of the stockholders and of all the people along the line of the proposed road throughout. The South Pennsylvania Railroad Company has yet to be written, and when given to the world will be what Europe travelers would "express interesting reading." In the present article are set forth in brief some facts in the history of the enterprise, with others equally important and an expression of good and many thoughts.

It is more than likely that the movements here made will be one day the subject of a searching topic in investigation. The facts here have hitherto remained from various causes, believed to be generally unknown.

THE ORIGINAL PLAN.

In the autumn previous several capitalists in Philadelphia conceived the idea of a new competing railroad between Pittsburg and Harrisburg, on the shortest line to the east and west coast. The plan would have the advantage over the Pennsylvania Railroad of taking in populous, manufacturing and mining towns. These gentlemen had had experience enough with the superiority of the country to be convinced, and knew that with the new road would have great future chances to avoid the fault of a comparatively unknown country, and open up new communities than the Pennsylvania Railroad. They had a special survey made of the route, and plans and profiles taken. At the eastern end the line started at a point on the south side of the Susquehanna River at Princeton, and by following through the valley of Conewago Creek, Hanover passed to the Monocacy gorge, a point between the Catoctin Valley, and the Blue Ridge through the Potomac Mountains and thence to the head of the Youghiogheny River at Harrisburg. Pittsburg being only to the state line of Pennsylvania, the road would have great advantages in the way of freight, a point through the Cumberland Valley, and through the Potomac Valley, and through the Shenandoah Valley, and through the Youghiogheny Valley, a point between
